

scatter global

Every vocation in every location. For His glory.

God designed it that way from the start—work is a blessing, not a curse.

In creation—not as a result of humanity's fall into sin—God prepared work as an instrument to draw out mankind's creative capacity and provide abundantly for human flourishing.

We want to live purposefully like that, using our marketable skills to bring glory to our Creator by serving our neighbors, everywhere on earth.

You don't have to choose between work and missions.

Today, billions have no access to the gospel.

Your job could change that.

Far from experiencing God's abundance, many people across the world have no one in their community who can help them get to know God at all, let alone reflect His glory to others.

An estimated 2.8 billion people live in places where there is no one around them to share the good news of Jesus Christ. And that number grows by 58,000 a day.

Meanwhile, most of the church's efforts and finances today are focused on places where the gospel is already available, rather than on the people who live in places with no Bible, no body, and no believers.

Your job could place you in daily, natural contact with those very people—the least reached.

The world needs what you have.

Some Have Already Made it Happen
They Just Went...

Mary's Story

"You can't leave."

His deep voice broke with a slight tremor that betrayed the emotion the proud CEO wanted to hide. He sat behind his large desk showing the appropriate distance and decorum of a male leader in his culture (there was no other type in this strict society.)

He sat quietly, separated by a large piece of ornate wooden furniture from this incredible South African lady who had helped to make his tenure the success it was, but inside he was standing, screaming, begging her to stay.

Mary looked at the older man in his long white pristine thob and his immaculately groomed black beard and saw the appreciation in his eyes. It warmed her heart because she knew he was sincere.

Her excellent work as a medical professional over the last fifteen years had not only caught his attention, it caused him to promote her to one of the highest positions in the institution. Her attitude was that she was doing it as unto the Lord; what he saw was character and competency much more excellent than any other person in her field in the hospital.

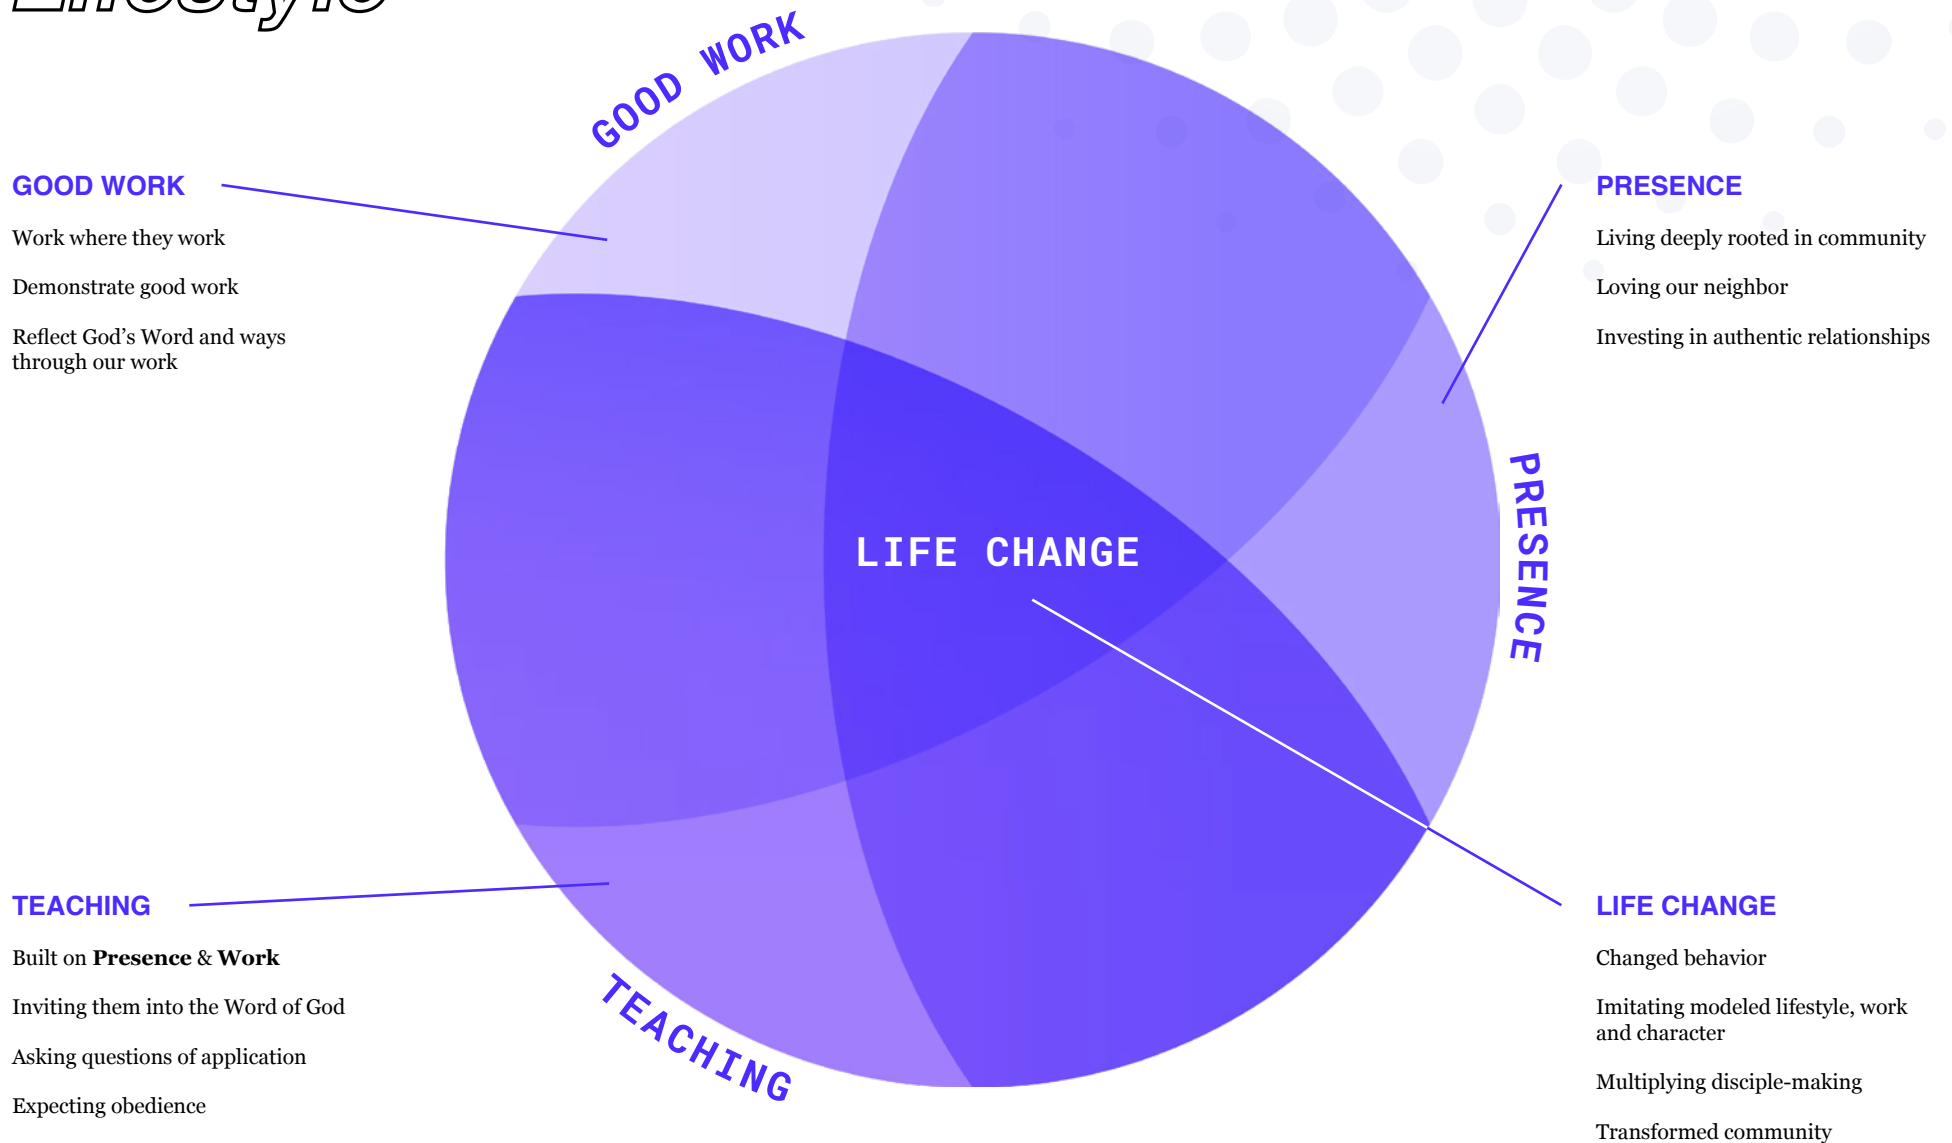

Promotion after promotion gave her responsibility over hundreds and with it the ability to live out her life as a light to those who had never heard of the Light before. Every day in the course of her duty she reflected excellence—and everyone noticed. Her credibility grew daily. As her credibility grew, so did the opportunities to share her faith.

Many workers and patients wanted to know the source of her gentleness, her caring spirit, her joy, her peace, her incredible skill. Mary lost no opportunity to share about the source. She had taken the time to learn their heart language and understand their culture so that she could share at the deepest level.

This unreached people were being impacted by Mary every day, and there are many in the kingdom as a result.

Excerpt from 'SCATTER', by Andrew Scott

Discipleship is a Lifestyle

We are with you in this. You're not alone.

When people begin to consider this lifestyle, questions inevitably arise. Most seem to wonder about the following:

“I can't find a job.”

We connect you to global career advising services and showcase live job opportunities in strategic locations.

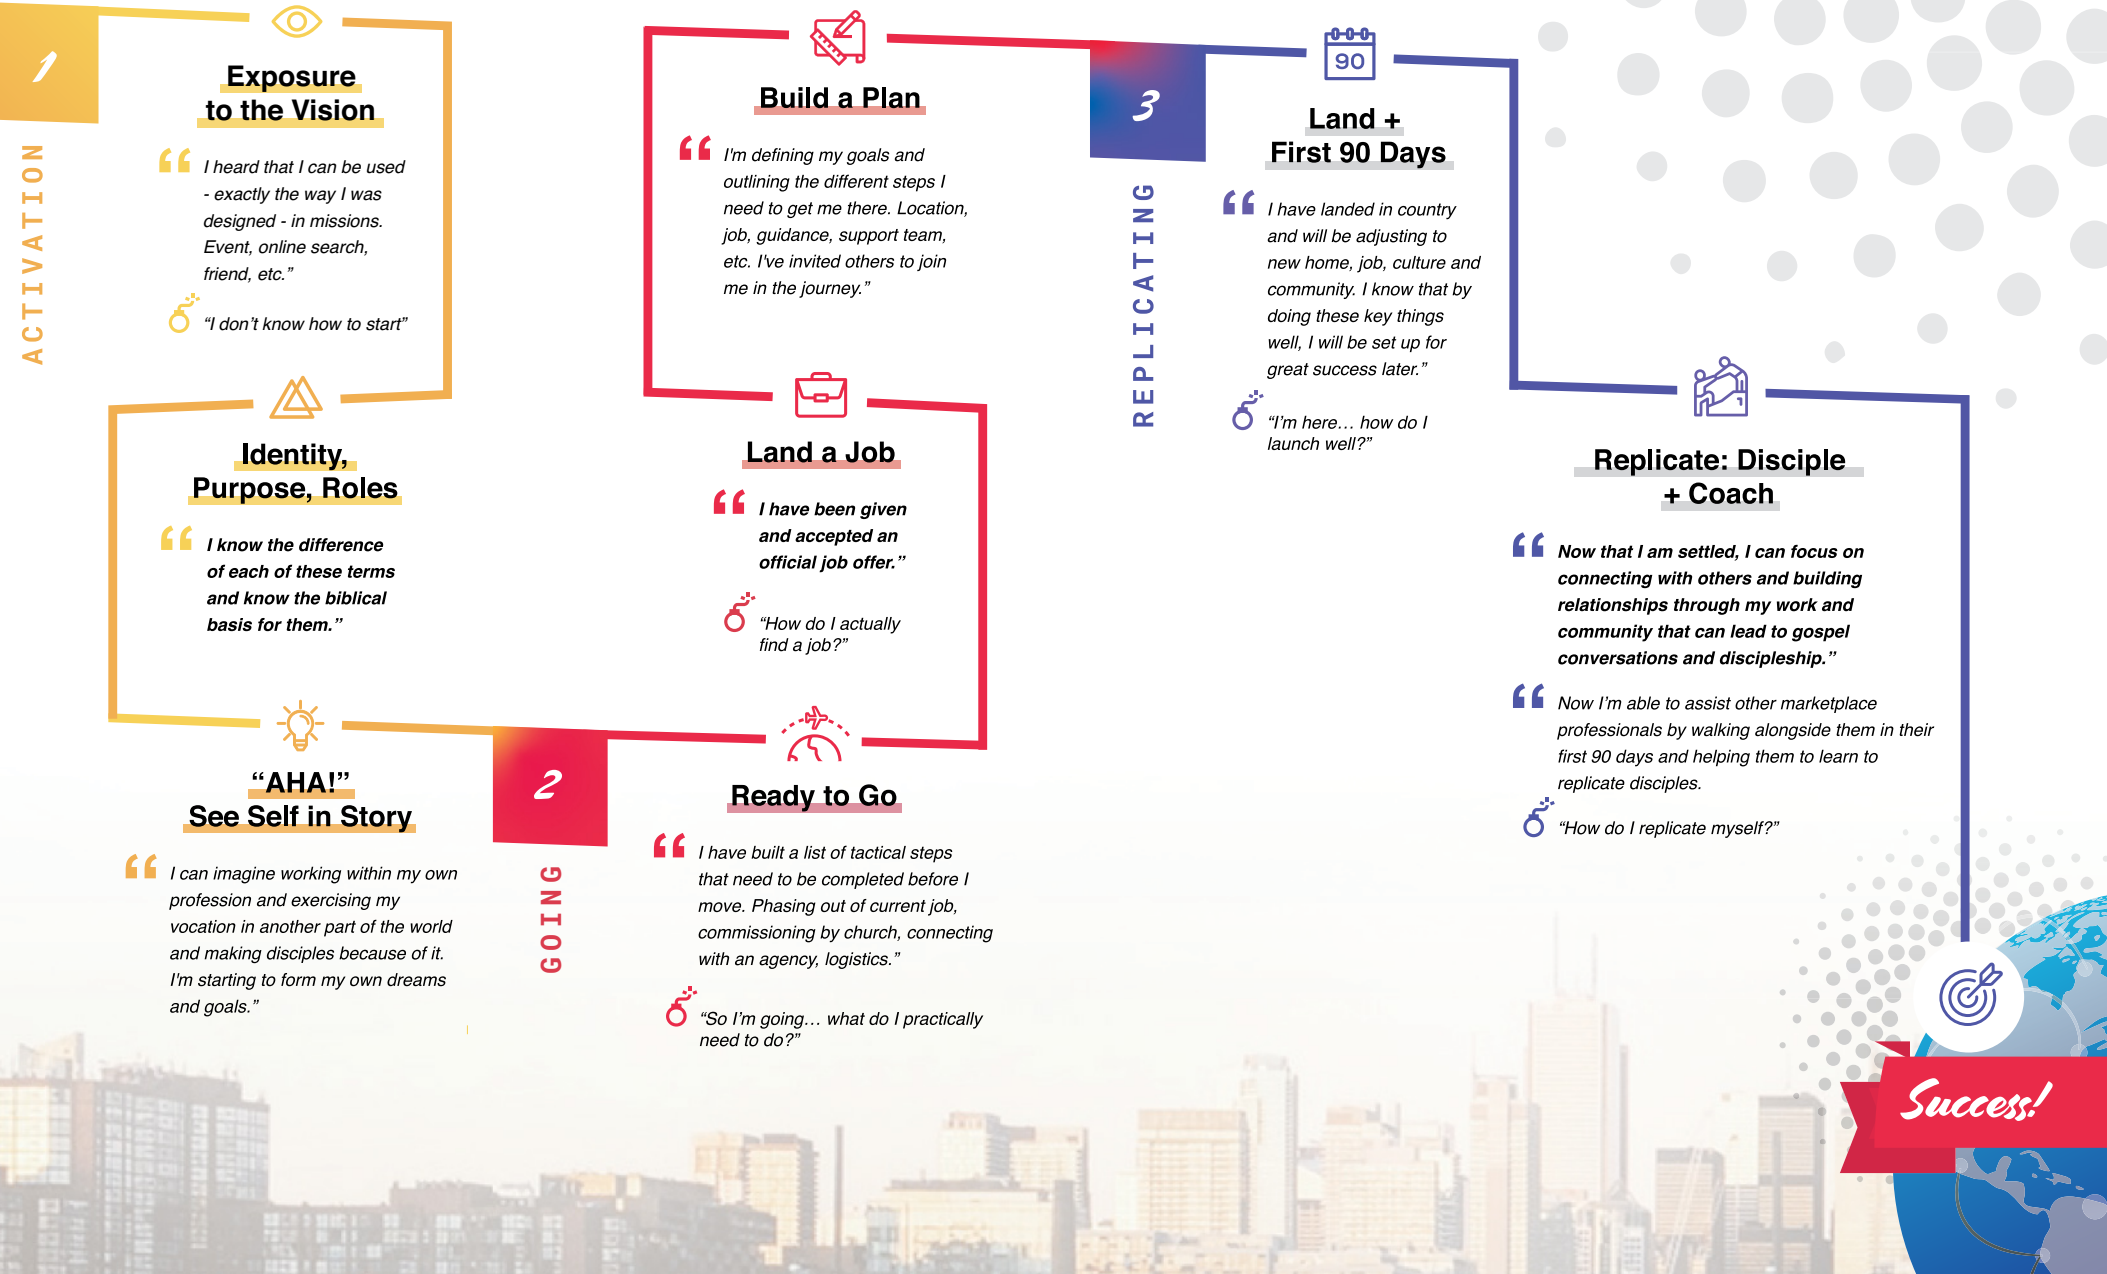

“I don't want to go alone.”

We help introduce you into a network of like-minded people living where you are headed, to international churches in the area, and to sending organizations for additional support.

“I need help.”

We help guide you through your journey by introducing you to a local coach and by providing resources all along the way.

Scatter Global Framework for Mobilization

Some Have Already Made it Happen They Just Went...

José's Story

“My work and my faith—I always saw them as very much integrated.”

The Middle East wasn't José's* first choice, geographically speaking. He and his wife had both known since they were teenagers in Chile that they wanted to serve the Lord overseas. But Jose also had a strong affinity for his job in IT and didn't want to leave his professional career behind for full-time ministry.

“When we started praying and looking at the opportunities, the Lord started to develop in us an interest and love for the culture and for the people here,” José explained. His family took an exploratory trip to the Middle East, which confirmed the region as a possibility.

“When we understood that coming to the Middle East would have to be by using my profession and getting a job here, that felt very natural and right in what the Lord had been working in our lives,” he said.

José works as a software engineer and manages a multi-cultural team for his company in the Middle East. His interest in engineering and general mechanics began at a young age, as did his desire to combine all of his life with his ministry. “My work and my faith—I always saw them as very much integrated,” he said.

Actually, in the Middle East, it's been easier for him to share his faith than it was in his home country. “Here, people are very interested to know my faith, and they will come directly, and they will ask me questions. By being open and honest in the way I live and work, it has allowed me to show my faith at work in motion,” he said. “It's given me the chance to share openly from the Bible, to pray with my colleagues... and people have come to the Lord from different religions.”

Introducing biblical principles to his team has also transformed the way his colleagues related to one another. He modeled how to use soft answers to bring down anger and how to speak the truth in love.

“I love doing what the Lord has [allowed] us to do.”

Name changed for security*

scatterglobal.com

